AGMANAGER - A TOOL FOR AGRICULTURAL PRODUCERS

You've got questions, AgManager's got answers...K-State Research and Extension is known for providing research-based information to citizens across the state. As a part of a broader unit, local Extension Offices are equipped to provide sound information to serve our local agriculture producers. One of the methods that helps us to provide that information is the website agmanager.info.

AgManager.info is a website originally produced in 2002 by faculty from the Kansas State University Department of Agricultural Economics. The site serves as a comprehensive source of information, analysis, and decision-making tools for agricultural producers, agribusinesses, and others. The goal of agmanager.info is to improve the organization of web-based material and allow greater access for agricultural producers and other clientele.

The site provides a wealth of information to answer the questions of agricultural producers. Helpful information on agricultural leasing, lease law, land values, crop and livestock marketing and outlook reports, farm management, agricultural policy, income tax information and agribusiness help producers in their day-to-day operations. Several topics include features that are updated weekly. Papers, presentations and videos by K-State faculty allow producers to view timely information that affects their enterprise. Decision-making tools, such as budget spreadsheets, and data sets make AgManager.info one of the most comprehensive and widely used university-sponsored website for applied research and economic outreach information.

Throughout COVID-19, the site has provided important information for ag producers. In addition to weekly updates, a series of conversations with specialists were held in March and April covering the economics of agriculture through the pandemic. Another round of discussions begins May 7, 2020 and will be held weekly at 7:00 p.m.

K-State Research and Extension is committed to making a difference for agricultural producers, families and consumers. For more information, visit agmanager.info or contact the Cowley County Extension Office 221-5450, 441-4565.
